From the Pastor's Desk....

So, what should I do with Jesus?" Pilate asked it first, but we've all asked it since. I believe it's a fair question and a necessary one. He called himself God, yet wore the clothes of a man. He called himself Messiah, but never led an army. He was regarded as king, but his own crown was thorns. People revered him as regal, yet his robe was stitched with mockery. Small wonder Pilate was puzzled. How do you explain such a man?

I believe one way is to take the walk, his walk, his last walk. During this Lenten season, is where I have tried to lead you. Have you followed his steps or stood back in the shadows? From Jericho to his entrance into Jerusalem. From the garden to the trial. From Pilate's palace to Golgotha's cross. We have watched him walk angrily into the temple, imagined his anguish in the garden of Gethsemane, and painfully up the Via Dolorosa. Witnessed the power from the empty tomb.

All of us have our own walk, witnessed alongside of Him. I was thinking of three walks, three journeys. Three slaves and the paths they took to freedom. Mary Barbour could tell you about her slavery, but she would rather tell you about her freedom. You see as a free person, she wandered the roads looking for work. She was victimized by opportunists. She refused to end up like many others who went back to the plantation. She walked on. Her walk to freedom was never forgotten. The path taken from slavery to liberation was vivid. She said it was more than a road, it was a release. The shackles opened and freedom dawned for her and her father.

Do you remember yours? Where were you the night the door was opened? Do you remember the touch of your Father? I hope it is permanently planted in your soul.

I am reminded of a third grader in my Sunday School class which I was teaching. He was the one disrupting the rest of us, climbing on chairs and banging on the underside of the tables. After class one of the other children ask me to do something with him. Little did she know, I had already tried. I prayed about the little boy and found out that he was from a broken home being raised by an aunt. He was rarely in school and often bullied other children when he was. One school counselor told me there were drugs and abuse in his home and that his father was in prison. I took the opportunity to meet with the boy each Sunday before class. He was reluctant to describe what was happening at home, often times saying nothing at all. If I touched him, he would cower and draw up his body. I continued to pray for him until one Sunday during our one-on-one, he asked through his tears, if he could be baptized. My heart leapt for joy! The Lord had heard my pleas and went to work on his little heart. I made contact with his aunt and asked if she would sponsor him, since his parents were unapproachable. What a glorious Sunday it was. It was Easter! For the first time I saw him smile and open his arms to the congregation. I have often wondered what happened to him. You see his mother moved him away (not due to anything the church had done.) I simply explained to her that her boy was way ahead of his time and that she should find a church for them both where he could be in Sunday school and continue to learn of God because he wanted to.

Every year thousands of people climb a mountain in the Alps, passing the stations of the cross to stand at an outdoor crucifix. One man noticed a little trail that led beyond the cross. He fought through the thicket and came upon another shrine that symbolized the empty tomb. It had been neglected and brush grew up all around it. Almost everyone went as far as the cross and no further. Far too few have moved beyond the cross to find the real message of Easter—the message of the empty tomb.

Green the grass. Ripe the bud. Yellow the flower. Blue the sky. Beautiful the butterfly. Risen the Lord!

Pastor's Report:

Greetings Easter people! Some of you may think it's been a long road to Easter Sunday and spring. The good news is this— It's a new year half past the virus.

Since last we met, my office and brain have been buzzing. I believe getting ready for Easter is more involved than Christmas. At least it has been this year. I have focused on thought-provoking sermons to make the Lenten season real for everyone.
